

This is a reminder of how a routine job can become a near miss or worse if we do not treat the job with the proper amount of attention. This near miss occurred during a routine inspection. Please remember to follow the safety processes and all other safety regulations to prevent these occurrence from happening here at the home of. We should be surveying the areas prior to any crane activities to ensure the area is stable. Remember that it is everyone's job and responsibility to keep everybody working here at safe. Everybody has the right to stop a job that they feel is not being performed safely or within guidelines.

As you can see the outrigger pads are one there stacked up. All they were going to do was inspect the crane! Wasn't going to lift anything! As the pictures show this can be a real problem if we don't set up our cranes properly every time the crane is used for any reason.
