

The following pictures are from a facility in South LA.

As you can see some small new tanks were being constructed while piles were being driven nearby by another contractor.

Luckily no one was injured as the tank that the crane fell on was already complete.

